Automatic network synthesis Automatic network synthesis (ANS), also known as automatic synthesis, automatic connection establishment, synthesis IDA, or syntactic generation, is a technology used to automate the definition, design and verification of communications networks. Automatic synthesis is an essential element in many contemporary network design and implementation tools, and appears to be becoming a de facto standard. In its earliest forms, automatic synthesis was used to automatically define a network topology by producing a description of the desired communications network. This technology 6d1f23a050
